Scoping the topic

Example

Here's an example of the decision process for selecting a topic and narrowing the scope. At each step, we make a choice about which option we want to pursue (the chosen options are shown here in italics).

1. Choose a domain/industry

- Food ordering, online learning, buying shoes online, etc.

2. Choose a more niche market

- Food ordering → ordering pizza from a pizza chain

3. Choose a user group (only one)

- Who are the users of a pizza ordering app?
 - Chefs who need to track incoming orders
 - Pizza delivery man
 - Store managers who want to see sales
 - Customers

4. Narrow down the users

- Office managers who buy 20 pizzas for a company party
- People who want to eat pizza inside the pizza shop
- College students who just want to order a pizza delivery

5. Choose a single critical user journey

- Sign-up for the app
- Set up payment
- Choose a pizza
- Check delivery time

The final scope: Design an app for college students to order pizza.

To create a diagram showing possible users and subjects you could target. Below is an example, which I created with Whimsical.com. You can use any tool you like for this process (e.g., digital tools, pen and paper, whiteboard, etc.).
