RECYCLE POINT

The design of these recycling bins was conceived by 'Chemistry' (www.chemistryteam.com), based on their award winning entry for Design Singapore Council's 10 Touchpoints competition.

The concept was inspired by recognizing that a mindset change towards recycling was needed. By transforming ordinary and functional bins into the recyclable items themselves, the bins become talking points that attract the attention and interest of passengers and visitors to the airport. The inclusion of Changi Airport's recycling efforts on each bin further reinforces that desire to change attitudes and create an emotional connection with people.

The screenshot displays the Material Theme Builder plugin on the Figma community page. The main visual is a large, stylized graphic featuring the text "Material Theme Builder" in a large, bold, dark red font. A smaller version of the same text and logo is visible in the top right corner of the graphic. To the right of the graphic, a mobile application interface is overlaid. The app shows a "wallpaper" selection screen with a "Dynamic" tab selected. Below this is a tip: "Tip: Select an element using Material Design styles and add an image below to update the colors." A preview area shows a red circular shape and a dark brown rectangular shape. At the bottom, there's a "Seed Color" slider with a dark red handle. To the right of the app, a mobile phone screen displays a "Care" section of a plant care app. The phone screen shows a "Houseplant Care Basics" article with a small cactus image and a "new" badge. Below it is another article about cactus care. The overall design is clean and modern, utilizing the Material Design aesthetic.
